This year like last year there is a 4 way tie for worst team in FBS football and in my imaginary scenario I can create a playoff. You have the option of creating your own the fantasy bracket. However, you should know that 2 teams are repeating from last year, Akron and New Mexico. I create this one where last year's 2 worst teams play each other.

I start with the University of Akron Zips from the Mid American Conference. This year their sole win was against Virginia Military Institute. Of course if you go back to last year's schedule you would know that the mascot is a Kangaroo which is a marsupial. I guess that the team can't jump its way to the endzone and it couldn't hide how bad they are. Maybe the coaching staff can find the real playbook in the kangaroo's pouch because after 2 years this is really getting silly.

The University of New Mexico Lobos hail from the Mountain West Conference. Their one win was against UNLV but to add insult to injury was that they lost to Sam Houston State. Go figure that out. These wolves, I mean Lobos, are just toothless canines who couldn't bite or be ferocious in any football game. Hopefully, the coaches can dig up the playbook from where the wolf hid its bones.

The University of Indiana Hoosiers hail from the Big Ten Conference. Their single win was against South Carolina State. Well no one can really define what a Hoosier is but I guess no one can define how bad this team is getting. They rebuilt the stadium because they thought things were improving but it just hasn't happened. Well there is always next year...

Florida Atlantic University Owls are in the Sunbelt Conference. Their solo win was against UAB in Conference USA. UAB was playing their final game so maybe UAB felt sorry for Florida Atlantic and let them win. If owls are supposed to be wise, then someone should advise the coaches because something is extremely wrong with this team. Maybe they can come with a new slogan, Let's Give a Hoot.
